

Proof of Funding Requirements for Student Visas

United States Citizenship & Immigration Services require international applicants to provide proof of available funds before an I-20 form can be issued.

Upon acceptance, you must submit an original Declaration & Certification of Finances Form, verifying the ability to pay education and living expenses for the first academic year of study. This document must be original (no copies), current (within the past 6 months) and certified by bank seal or notary. If you are currently in the United States on an F-1 visa (transferring from another U.S. college or university), you must notify your previous institution and complete a new certification of finances and obtain a new I-20 from Rhode Island College.

Expenses will vary depending on whether you are living in college housing or in a sponsor's/ relative's home. Generally certified bank statements from any number of sources (self/relative/sponsor) can be used to verify funding for tuition, fees, on-campus room, board and other expenses. A relative/sponsor can verify that your board and room will be provided free of charge (please complete attached Affidavit of Sponsor Providing Free Room & Board). Also you may list on-campus employment (Students are allowed to work on-campus up to 20 hours per week. A student could expect to earn $4,000 to $5,000 dollars per year), scholarships or loans you have received from any source. All sources of support must have official documentation and equal at least $37,899. Additional acceptable forms of documentation are indicated on the Declaration and Certification of Finances Form.

Holders of student visas are required to be full-time students (minimum of 12 credit hours for undergraduate students and 9 credit hours for graduate students each semester).
