*RHODE ISLAND COLLEGE . . . here tranquil, pensive—
a strong, young animal, set in her natural surroundings.
Beneath: a vibrant, pulsating, everchanging unity, torn from the turmoil of diverse, interacting moods and personalities. Her faces are your faces. Your spirit and ideas are her life's blood; your talents her veins of expression.
Her halls and pathways are heavy with the memories that are your lives. She is you and you she. She is yours and you belong to her—two lives, inextricably mingled in the drama, the impact, which is . . . RHODE ISLAND

These are the memory pieces of a picture only you know. Follow the first floor line of Alger—back, deep back in your mind's eye—and SEE: Craig-Lee, framed in Spring on your way to the caf; Adams, when, for once, the roof's not leaking; the time when YOU owned the soccer field, and a tree looking like it just finished exams. Do you have the picture? Each graduate has his own. And in each picture? . . . RIC is re-born.

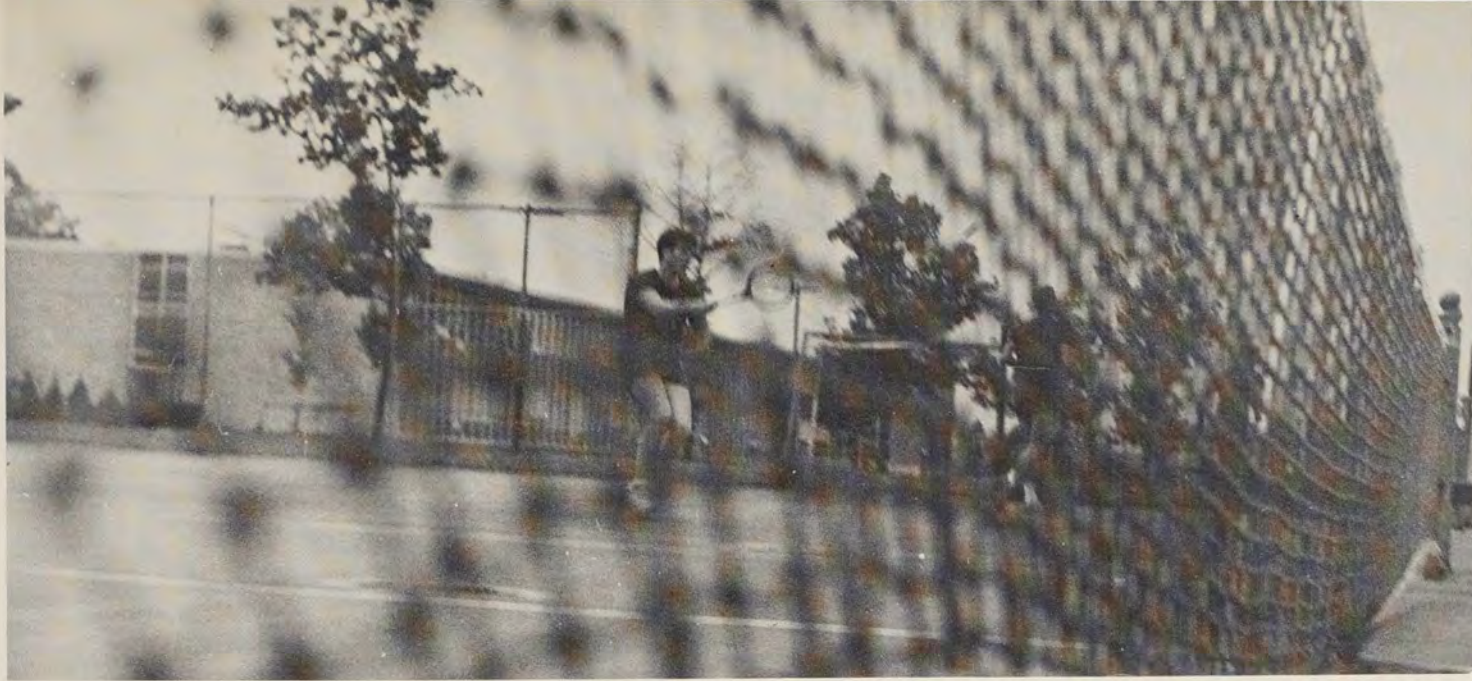

Truly the poet must call her a queen. Hers is the gentle imposing figure of a monarch among his subjects, and too—the subtlety, the ambiguity of a knowingly beautiful woman. She grants audience to the sun, and presides over the Congress of Day and Night. No two faces the same though each lasts the life of a breath . . . Enough! Enough! . . . for each is one frame in the film of moment-impressions which captivate the unique imprint of her majestic personality.

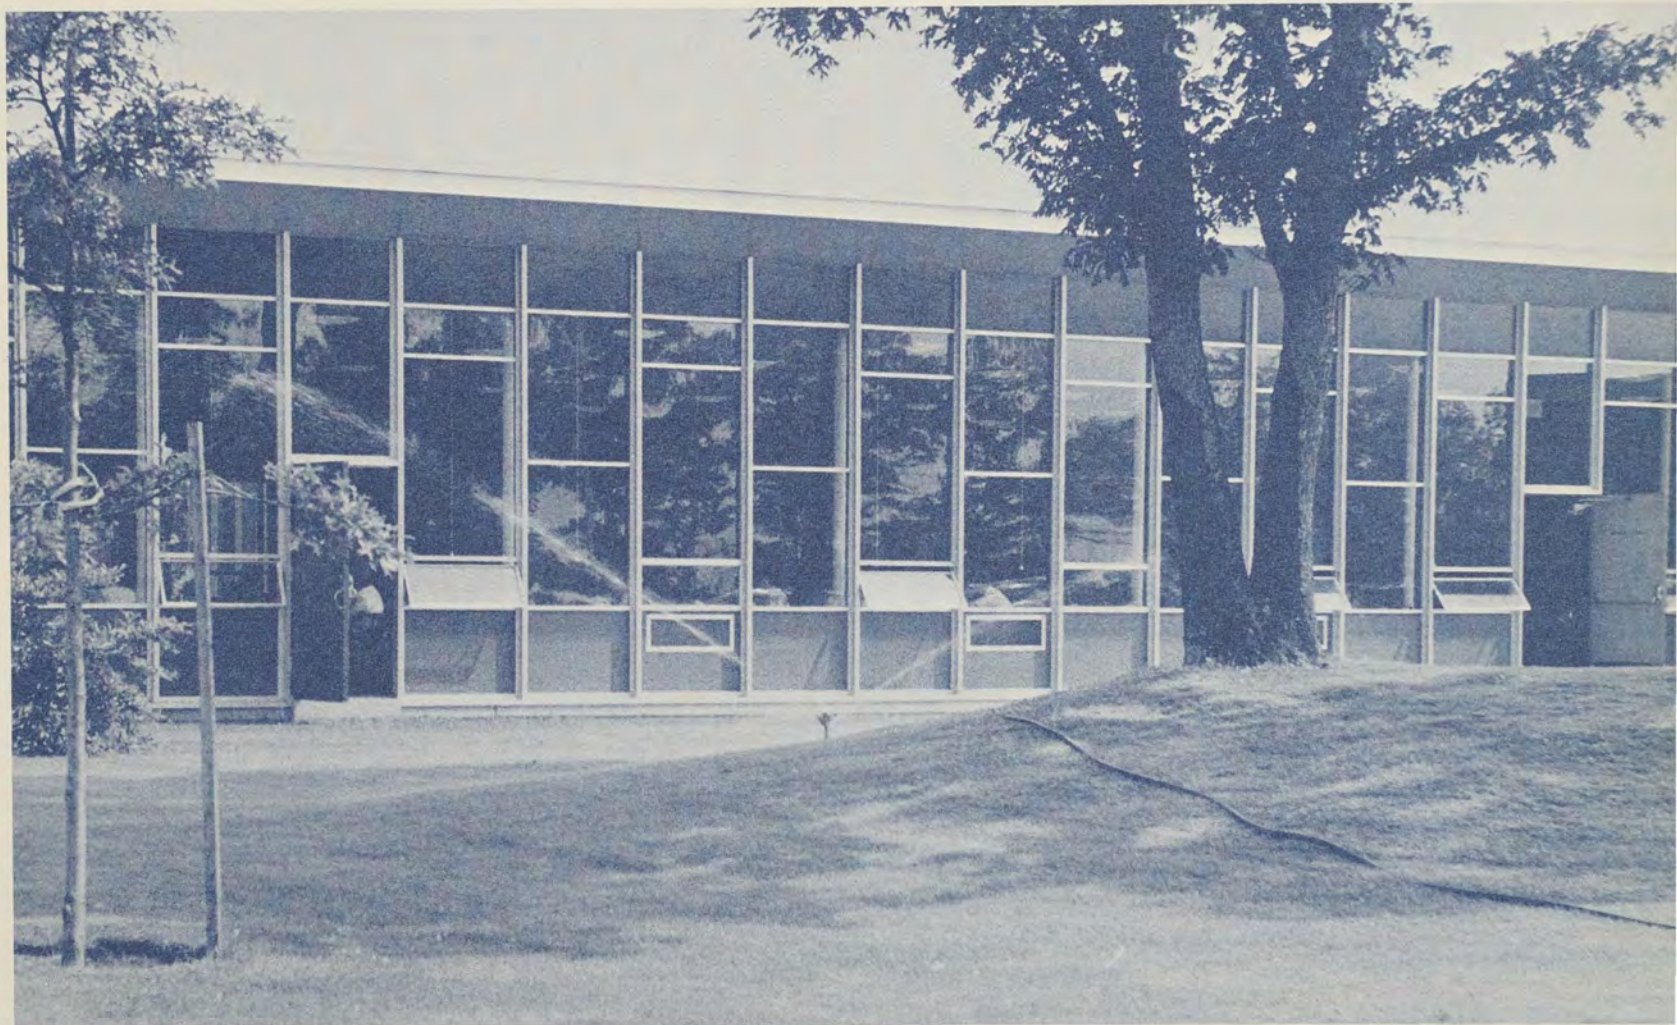

No less a city than the city herself—an intricate pattern of separately working organizations and activities, contributing to the pleasure and enrichment of the community as a whole. Whether it be in the enduring cheers of a spirited pep rally, the whispered and puzzling queries of the spectators at an art exhibit, the "thwock" of a tennis ball's singing over the net, or the shuffling of slow feet on a dance floor, the city registers her presence, makes known her birthright of recognition as a living individual—with hopes, with dreams, with a faith in the future which demands her youthful involvement in the Now.

How many seasons has she seen and how many more will her wise eyes know? How many more snows will curl around Roberts and twirl in little wind-driven eddies around 8:30's incoming feet? How many more eyes will behold Spring through this glass or, coming through these doors, gaze upon the table Summer spreads on her own green tablecloth? As many as the snowflakes . . . the leaves . . . the blades of grass? Perhaps. But they are unimportant. These are the snows, the leaves, the grass you knew. They only are important.

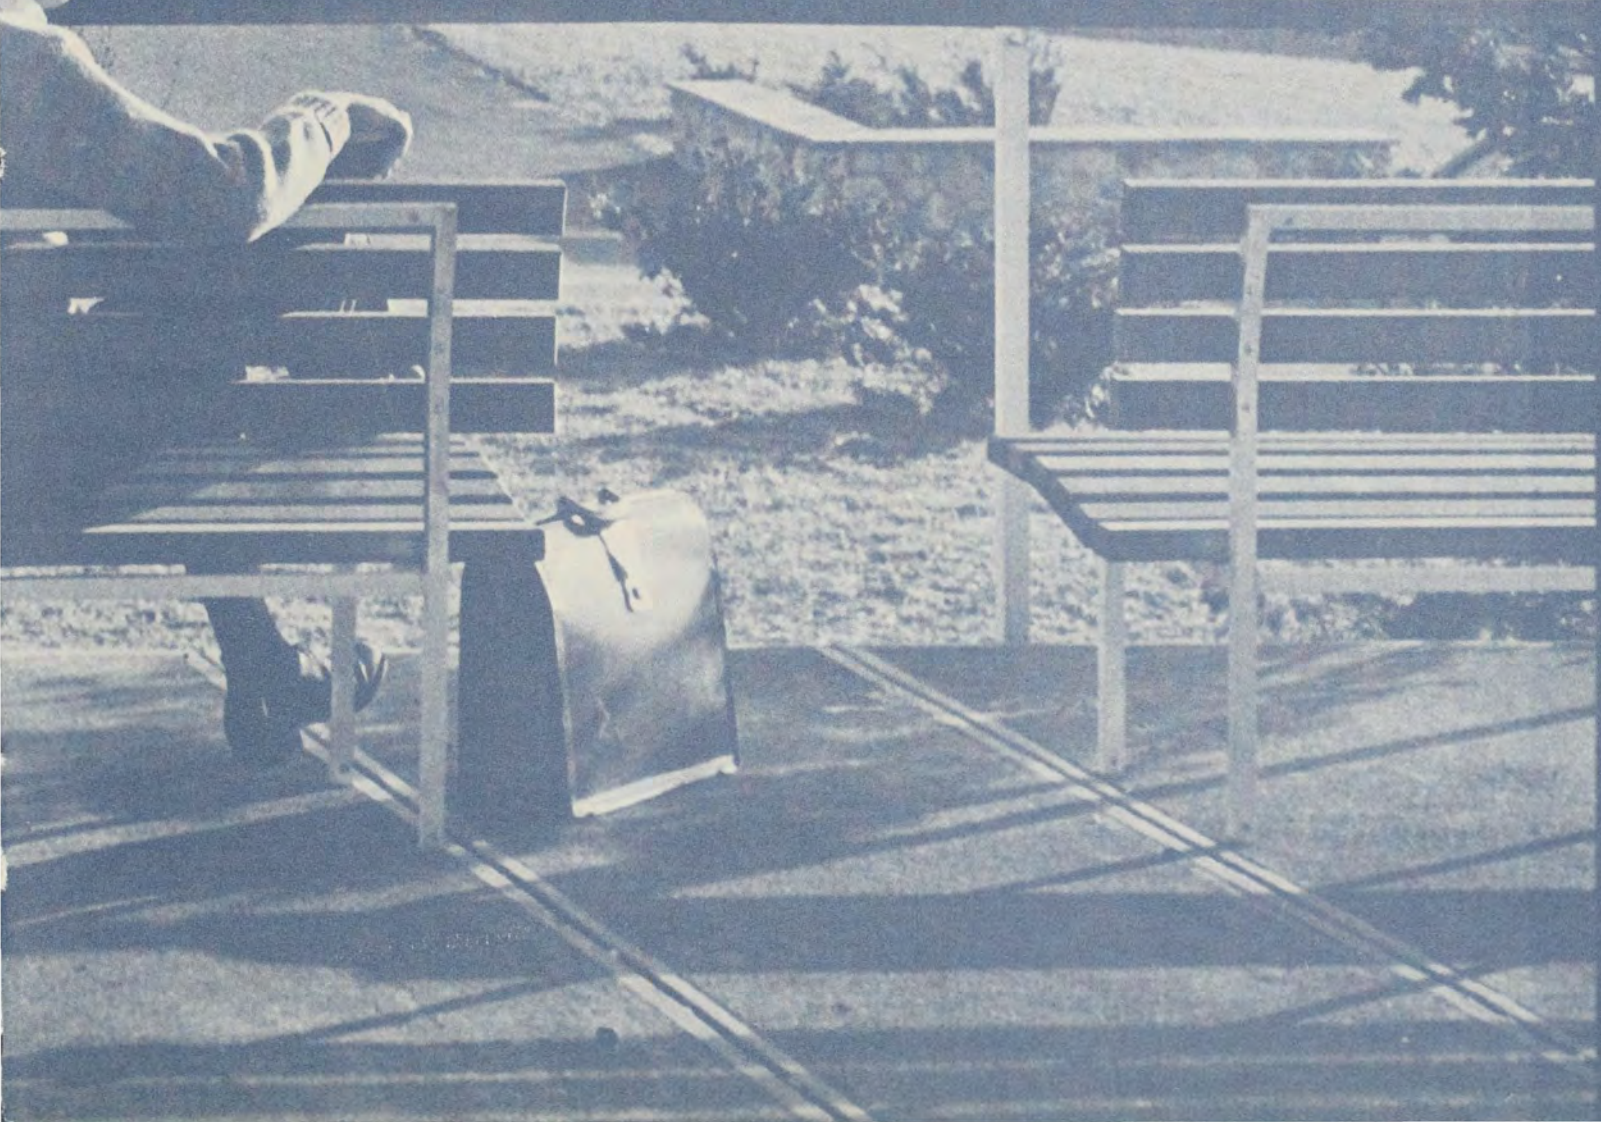

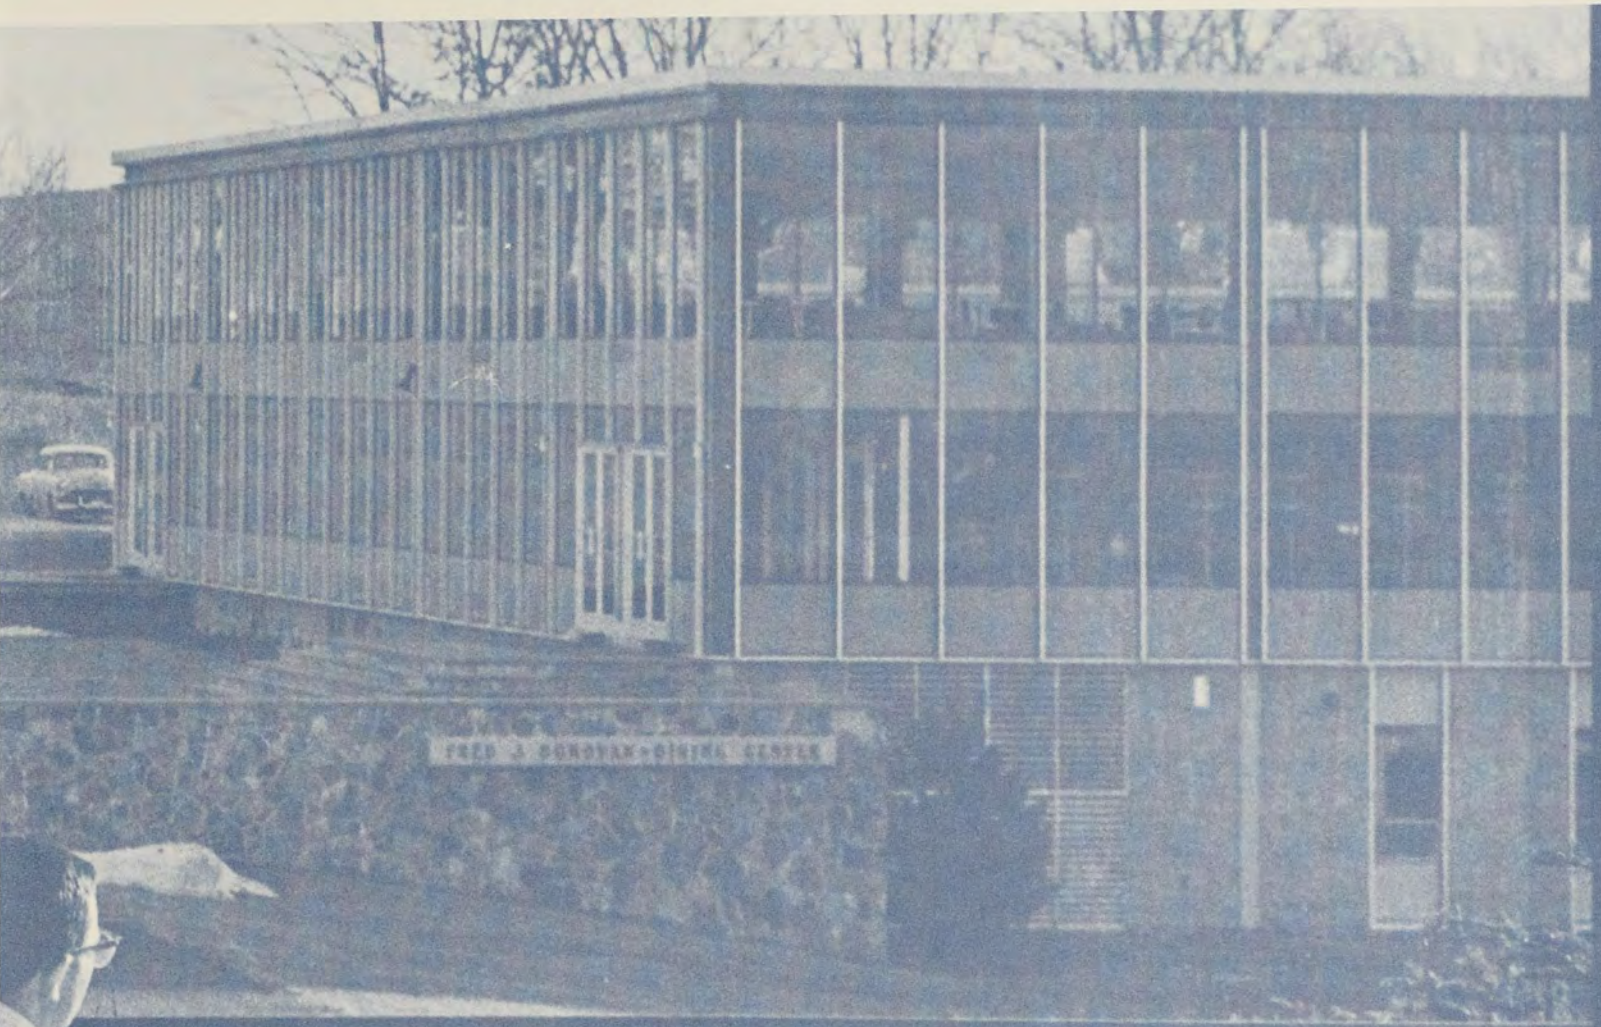

GRADUATES

Egress

Preparing them to go, we were not ourselves prepared that they should go. This separation takes us unawares. Struggling to say or do something appropriate, we are easy prey to the blasé gesture, the trite phrase. And still what can we offer that they who leave might value having with them?

This only then to you: Our hearts would keep you with us; our desires urge you on. Bidding you farewell, we warm our hearts at the fires our friendships have kindled. We stand and wave with "Hail; Farewell," and, stooping to the flames: "... stay but a moment—take this candle with you ..."

Regress

A clipping from forgotten days, a name, a sound, a picture—worlds come rushing back, tossing, tumbling, turning, tripping over one another, intermingling, juxtaposed: the elements of a Joycean phrase, crystallized in the cloudy stuff of memory.

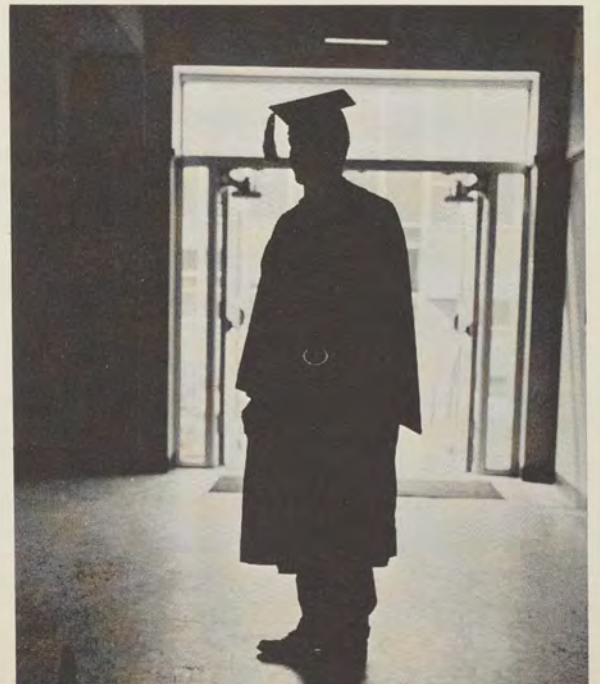

ACTIVITIES

Digress

We hold this truth to be self-evident: that there can be no good work where there is not also strong diversion. Even the most tenacious bookworm occasionally must forsake the world of the text. It is in these moments that activity thrives. Activity to rejuvenate the book-bound mind, shake loose the kinks that have accumulated during long periods of study. To round out the educational experience we turn from the intensely personal world of formal study to the essentially informal sphere of co-operative efforts. Herein lies the balance.

Congress

In the strict sense of the word, campus organizations are a congress: a "moving together." The work of these student groups can be viewed as a symbolic parallel of the interaction of the academic disciplines themselves. Separate and distinct though their individual endeavors may be, all work with a common goal: the broadening, the enrichment, the "rounding out" of undergraduate experiences.

We, the students, as people . . . Our heritage is the life around us. To know us, know our faces: wonder at our admiring bewilderment among the workings of science and fine art; cry with the empathy that grips us under the earthy half-tones of a compelling folk-song; live in the spirit of our smiles and light laughter as we move among each other on the dance floor. To know us, know our faces: we, the students, a part of each other, of society . . . a part of the race called Man.

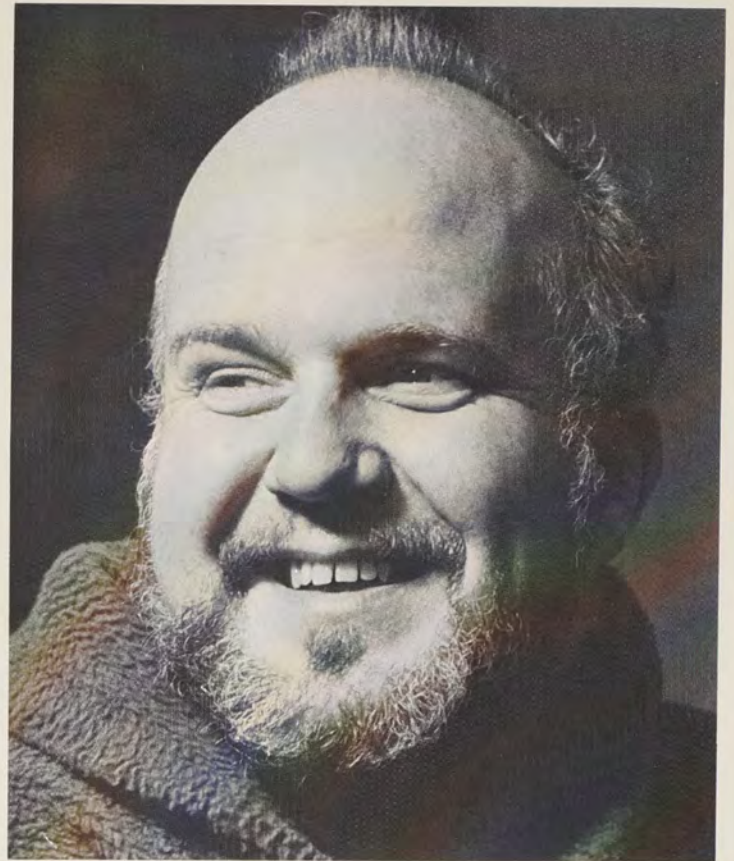

FINE ARTS SERIES National Ballet

The 1963-64 Fine Arts season got off to a fine start with the performance of the National Ballet in early November. The evening's program consisted of "Les Sylphides," the pas de deux "Sylvia," "Homage au Ballet," and a new production "Con Amore." The performance of the company under the direction of Fredrick Franklin was a study in grace and beauty. All present would agree that the ballet fully realized its aim — "to be a professional ballet company . . . worthy of the nation's capital."

FINE ARTS SERIES

Henry IV

Shakespeare's "Henry IV, part one" was presented in December by the Stratford, Ontario, Canadian Players. The players, dressed in fine costume, emphasized their fine acting ability by performing on a very simple set. The audience will remember especially the excellent battle sequence and the fine portrayal of Sir John Falstaff by Ron Bishop. He truly brought this Shakespearian character to life.

FINE ARTS SERIES After Dinner Opera Company

"An Evening of Lyric Theatre with the After Dinner Opera Company" was the March presentation of the Fine Arts Series. The entire cast consisted of three performers and a pianist. Their program was designed to appeal to all music enthusiasts, both serious and light-hearted. The program began with "Aromanci 66," an Austrian number, then skipped across the ocean to California for a western, "Sweet Betsy from Pike," and finally to ancient Greece for a tale about "Apollo and Persephone." The performance was a refreshing change of pace from the traditional types of entertainment.

Vance Packard

Vance Packard, a noted author, delivered the Alumni Lecture early in November at Roberts Hall. Mr. Packard is perhaps best known for his three best selling books — The Status Seekers, The Hidden Persuaders, The Waste Makers, and his latest work, The Pyramid Climbers. As a social critic, he enjoys a good deal of popularity as was evidenced by the large gathering for the lecture. His talk dealt with the subject of "America in Upheaval."

HOMECOMING Spirit

The R.I.C. Athletic Field was the setting for the annual alumni- varsity soccer game on Saturday afternoon, October 19. At half time the reigning queens led a motorcade of courtiers and class floats around the field, after which a plaque was presented to the class with the best float — the Class of 1965.

HOMECOMING Ball

The Homecoming Ball held at the Sheraton Biltmore on Friday, October 18 opened the activities for the weekend. Highlight of the evening was the crowning of the Homecoming Queen. This year two queens, Rosemary Zanfagna and Patricia Hincks, shared the honor.

HOMECOMING Fantasticks

An off-Broadway musical "The Fantasticks" directed by Richard Russell was presented on Saturday evening, October 19, in Roberts Hall. This production was quite unique. The small cast, performing on a plain wooden platform with four poles, used only music and words to create its scenery and illusions. Throughout the production the audience was treated to an enjoyable blend of comedy, satire, and serious verse. This imaginative performance brought Homecoming 1963 to a close.

RIC THEATRE

Can Can

An all out combined effort was made by students as well as faculty in presenting the first major musical, "Can Can," on this campus. Much hard work and effort went into every aspect of this fine production. The talents of the Modern Dance Club and Rhode Island College Theatre were presented with the musical accompaniment of the faculty orchestra. The final product, which was presented late in November, was artfully executed in every aspect from acting and costuming to scenery and lighting. It was a job well done.

CHRISTMAS BALL

"Christmas Round the World" was the theme of this year's Christmas Ball. The ball is an annual event sponsored jointly by Kappa Delta Pi and The Rhode Island College Education Association. The gaily decorated Donovan Dining Center provided the atmosphere for this highlight of the holiday season.

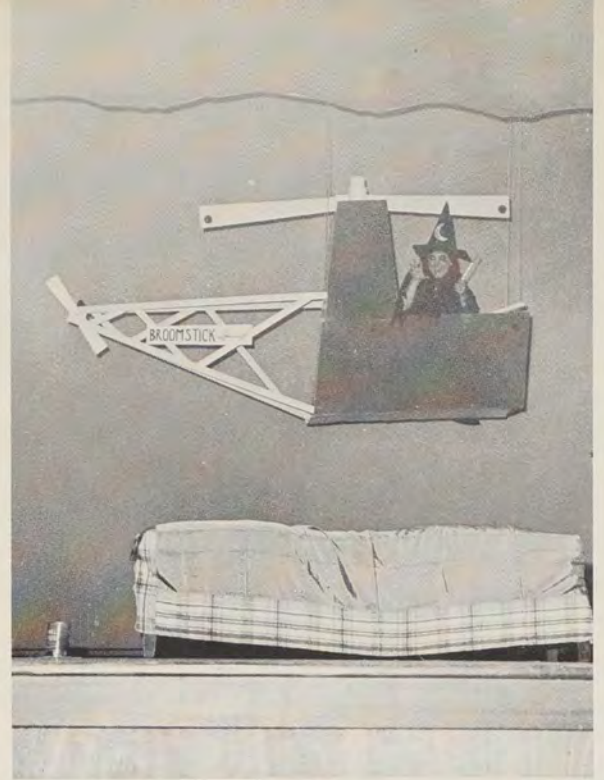

WINTER WEEKEND

Stunt Nite "Witch is Witch"

Witch Is Witch was the title of the lively comedy presented by the sophomore class. A fairy tale provided the framework for this story of black magic which captured the First Place Honors in this intra-class competition.

WINTER WEEKEND

Stunt Nite "4691 – Those Were the Years That Were"

4691 — Those Were The Years That Were was the presentation of the senior class which attained Second Place Honors. As the author put it, "the original idea for this production came to mind while eating a ham sandwich on rye with mustard." This light-hearted combination of satire and song was a backward glance at some of the events of the past four years.

WINTER WEEKEND

Stunt Nite "Romeo & Juliet"

The production of the junior class was entitled Romeo and Juliet. As the title implies this modern day couple faces opposition to their love and is confronted with the problems evolving from inter-racial marriage.

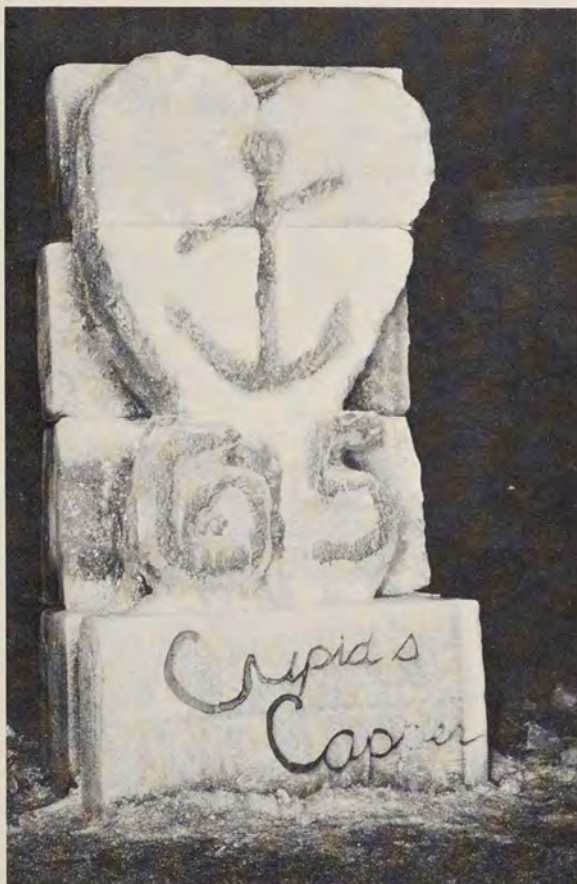

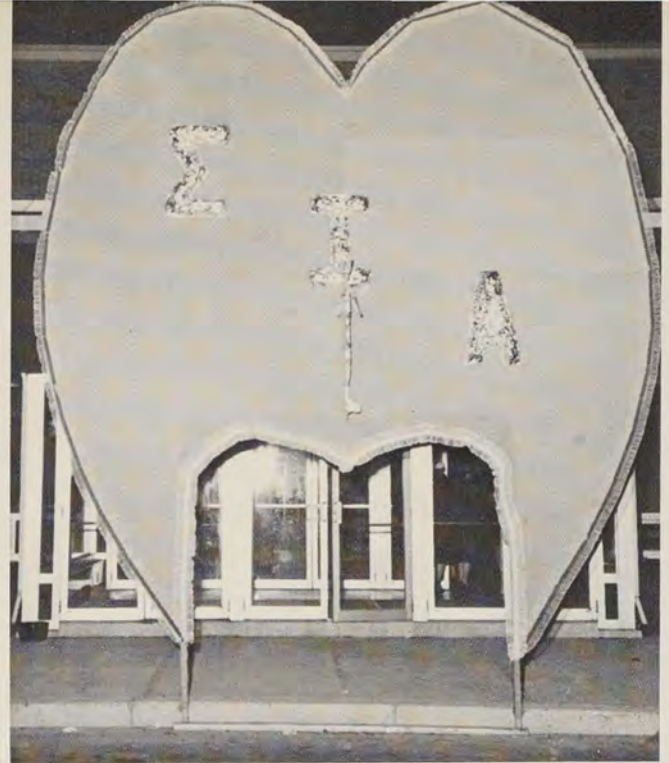

WINTER WEEKEND Stunt Nite "Whose Town?"

The freshman class presented Whose Town?, a farce in three acts. It dealt with an author's attempt to find places for some misfit characters.

WINTER WEEKEND

Displays

Each year classes and various organizations on campus vie for honors in the Winter Weekend display contest. All entries are judged on suitability of theme, attractiveness, durability, and originality by the faculty judging committee. This year first place was awarded to Mary T. Thorp Hall. Second place honors were shared by Sigma Mu Delta and Sigma Iota Alpha.

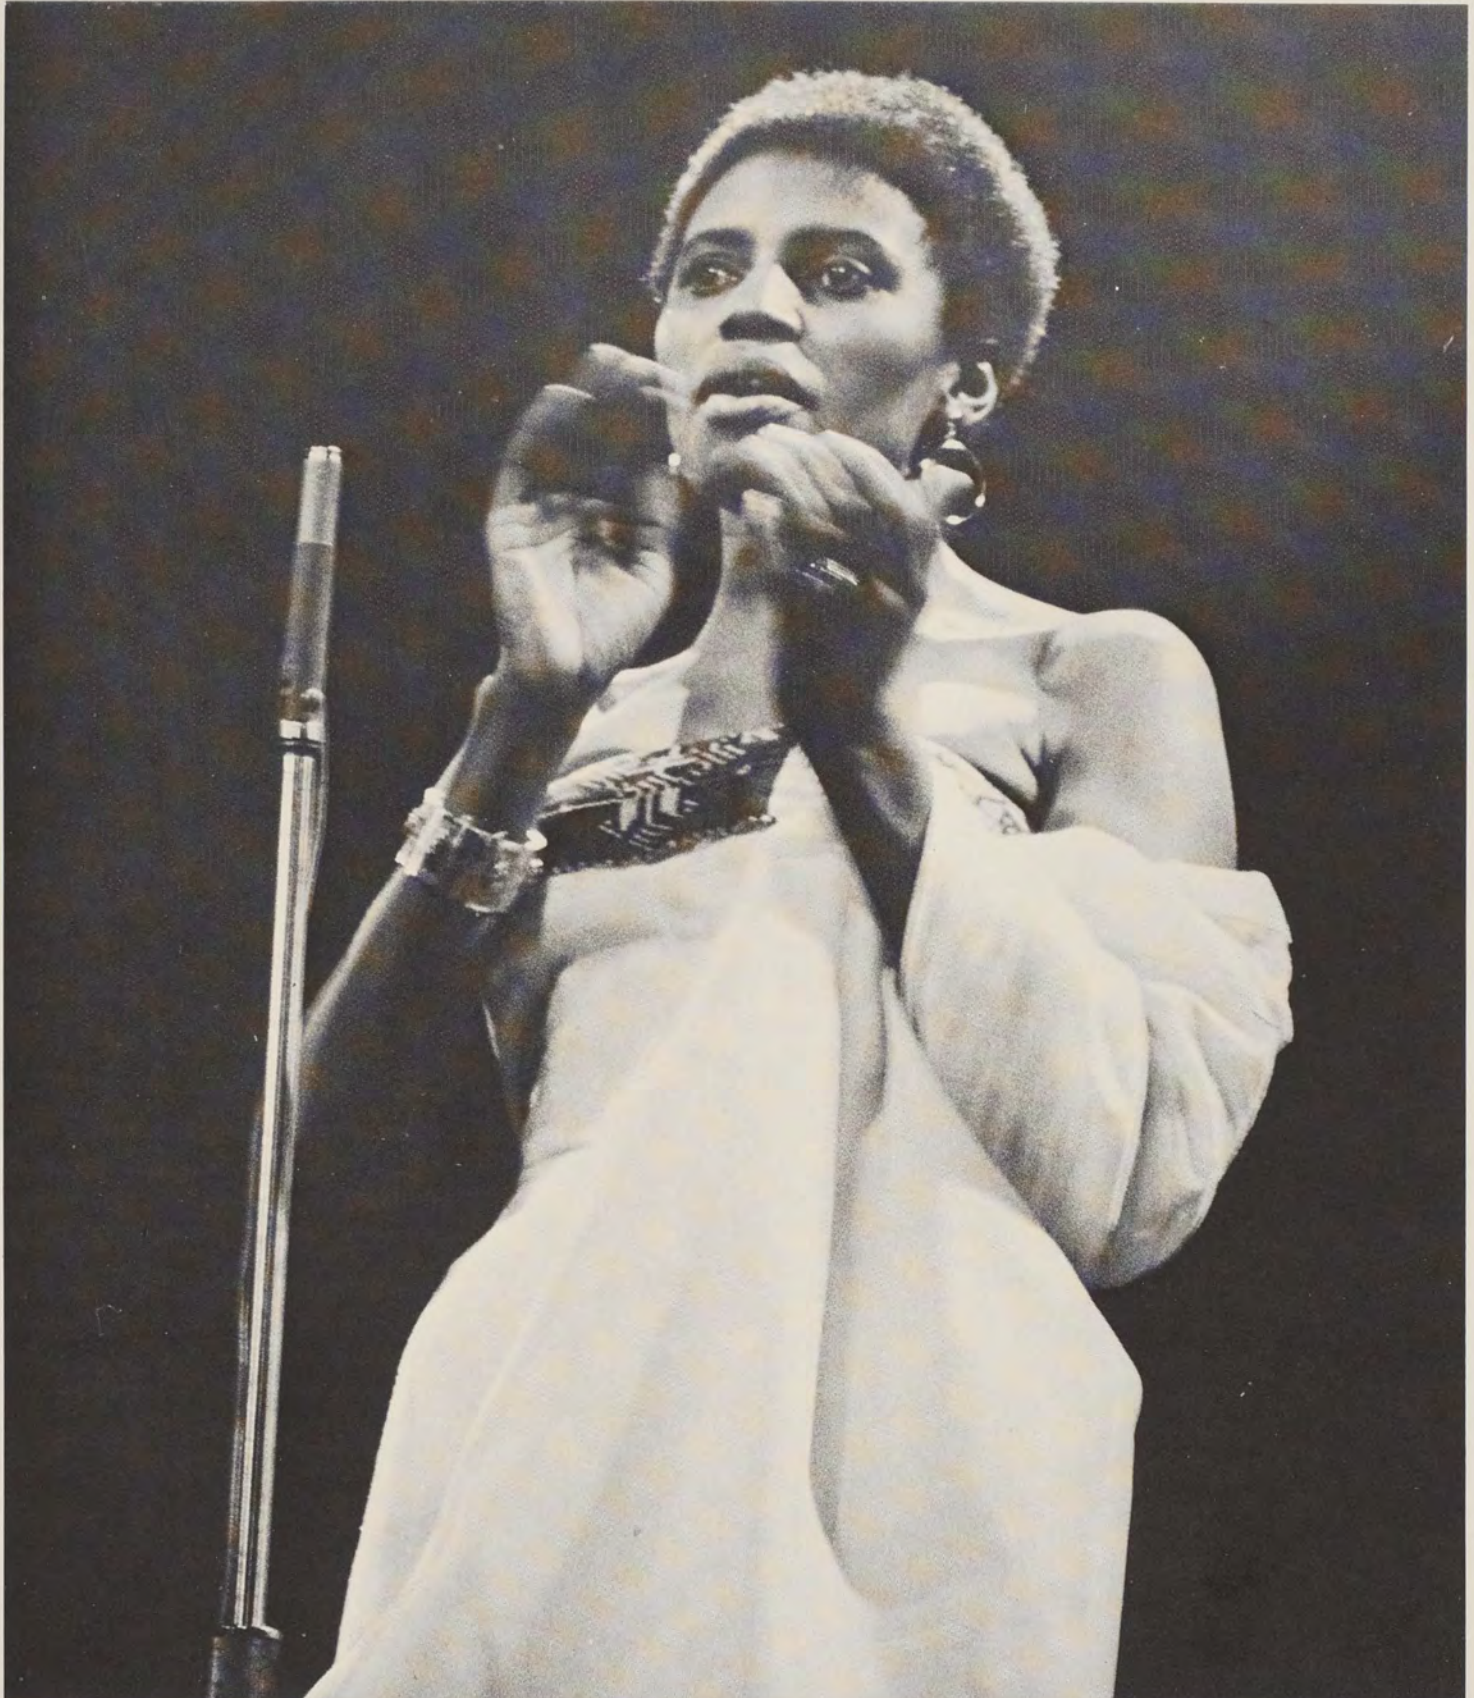

WINTER WEEKEND Cupid's Capers

The Hearthstone Motor Inn was the setting for the All College Ball held on Saturday February 15. The climax of the evening came when Josephine Squillante was crowned All College Girl. This was the seventh annual Winter Weekend at the college with the appropriate theme—Cupid's Capers.

WINTER WEEKEND

Concert

Miriam Makeba, a noted folk singer, was featured at the concert on Sunday February 16. Miss Makeba is a young Xosa tribeswoman from Johannesburg South Africa. She flavored her program with many songs from her native Africa as well as folk songs from other lands. The audience especially enjoyed the tongue clicking "Xosa Click Song" which she sang in her native dialect.

Aggress

The last cheers hang hollow
 In the empty air of the stands;
 The twirling shapes in white and gold
 Sway phantom crowds by unseen hands.

Somewhere on other chalk-marked
 fields
 A different game goes on,
 While here the twilight witnesses
 The crowd, the players—all are gone.

Coach Ed Bogda's soccer team met with much disappointment this past season. RIC won only one game and tied one, losing eleven. After three consecutive losses in pre-season tournament play, Rhode Island College's Anchormen settled down to playing sound, aggressive basketball. Travelling through a busy schedule, with one or two unexpected defeats, Coach Sheehan's forces compiled an enviable 22 win — 8 loss record. During the season the fine offense five times scored over 100 points, while the stringent defense held the opponents' scores down. Soaring high, the Anchormen captured second place in the N.A.I.A. Tournament and gained their first New England States Athletic Conference title. Another important achievement was their number one rating in rebounding in the N.A.I.A. This nationwide mark is a good indication to the strong, aggressive basketball employed by Coach Sheehan's charges. Every member of the team is to be congratulated, especially Capt. Charlie Wilkes, Mike VanLeesten, Jack Wheeler, Bill Nicynski, and Bill McCaughey. McCaughey's fine play inspired the Anchormen time and again, as he pulled in rebounds and poured in points. The 6'6½" sophomore, M.V.P. of the Holiday Tournament, was the driving force behind the great achievements of Tom Sheehan and his fine team. Congratulations coaches and players.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

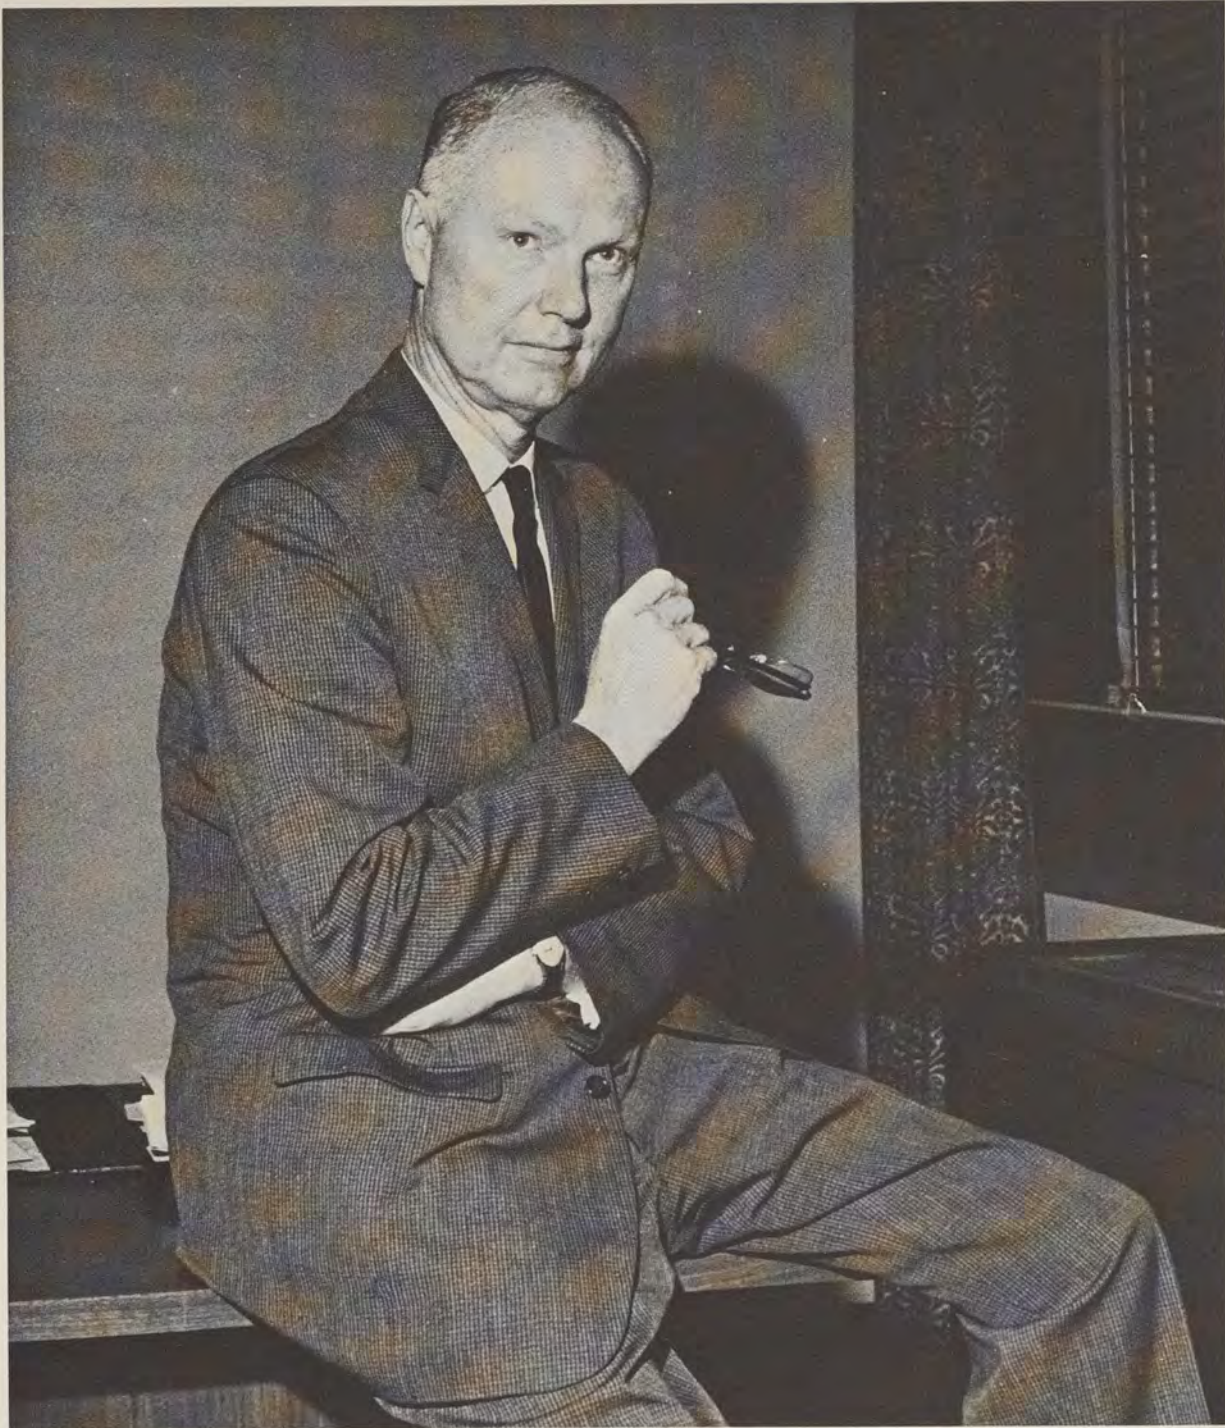

ADMINISTRATION

Progress

If to oversee the growth of a human child is a responsibility calling for wisdom, courage, understanding, and foresight, equally demanding is the task of supervising the growth of a young campus responsible for the development of a young intellect. Such is the daily task of this administration. We would pause to pay tribute to this core of administrators who wear so lightly the mantle of their accomplishments.

President's Address

Your four years at the College have been turbulent ones. The life of learning and maturing is itself turbulent. But when that learning and maturing have taken place on the rapidly expanding and changing campus which is Rhode Island College, the turbulence has been squared and then it has become cubed by pressures and changes in our society, of which the College is one of its instruments.

Because the intensity of turbulence constantly accelerates and change has taken us into unforeseen ways, no other class has faced the number and degree of problems and opportunities that you have faced. Academic standards have risen. The intellectual, aesthetic and social life of the College has quickened. The campus political ways of students and faculty alike have floundered, then been reorganized. Old ways of communication have failed, and new ways have succeeded more in the promise than in the fact. All this turbulence and learning have shaken you more and informed you more than any other preceding class. You have not found security nor final answers. You have found college life harder and more demanding. Hopefully, all of you have had fleeting glimpses into the vast vistas of knowledge and truth as the mists of ignorance have been momentarily lifted by your college experience.

Of all college generations, your generation has been most shaken. There should be no wonder that you face a crisis of conscience—that you confuse consensus with truth, and that you confuse endless vistas of yet undiscovered, and even undiscoverable, truth with the moral truths we know because we possess God's Grace.

You have done well these past four dynamic years. Rhode Island College is a much better place for your having been here. If you would serve well, know that your obligations to know and to love the truth and to respect your own integrity must come before your love for and your service to mankind.

May I extend my best regards to the young people attending Rhode Island College and express the wish that the challenges in the years ahead may be interesting and many. It is my hope that more young people will become interested in government, politics and public service, for the youth of any land is its really true resource.

And All Other Helpers

And to our parents, girlfriends, and boyfriends whose support and confidence enabled us to complete the year.

The editor will forever be grateful to the many contributors who helped to create the 1964 Janus, an entity in itself. But for special merit and indebtedness must be cited 11 people who are the responsible crux, the Janus producers who formulated plans and put them into action.

Can the editor ever forget the spontaneous interaction which would evoke either mounds of laughter or tears or both; the feelings of accomplishments which were frequently reversed to feelings of panic and frustration when deadline dates came creeping nearer.

The bright spots of this past year that must not go unnoticed were: Clarke Lowery's brilliant writing ability which greatly enhanced the yearbook; Marie Prisco's eye for artistic layout design and her good-natured spirit; Elaine Monaco and her perseverance with needed photography and the innovations of her activities section; Frank Gromling who enthusiastically produced the liveliest athletic section ever to appear in an R.I.C. yearbook; financial wizards, Maggie Carr and Charlie Abosamra, without whose monetary schemings the Janus could never have been so esthetically produced (due to the inadequate amount of money allotted for the 1964 edition); Joe Carello for his amazing display of genius and singularity in attacking outdoor and colored photography; three staff members noted for their organizational ability and firmness and willingness of purpose—Carol Forlasto, a reliable and devoted secretary who distinguished the Janus with accurate and speedy correspondence and listings; Fran Syner whose vivacity and diplomacy enabled her in matters of obtaining boosters and situations concerning administration contact; Barbara Ciccio, a highly dedicated staff worker, whose systematic planning of the senior section made everything go as smoothly as clockwork; and Bill Sloane, representative from Foote & Davies Yearbook Publishers, whose many hours of gentle yet direct suggestions and guidance proved invaluable.

We each gave of ourselves, the most precious of all gifts. Our work on the 1964 Janus is over, the end, the closing of a chapter in our lives, a part of our past for which we can never account with a first-hand present glimpse. Surely we all close the 1964 Janus with a great sigh of relief and satisfaction; yet, if we had to do it all over again, to throw every idea out the window and to begin from the beginning, this editor is confident of your reaffirmation of support because she knows you are all spirited enough and, more important, nice enough.

To those collaborators mentioned above, please excuse any unnecessary screaming and raving and ranting on the part of the editor. In her excitable moments, she resorts to these methods for inciting enthusiasm to get a job well done. Now in a more dignified display of appreciation, she can again only use the well-worn but nevertheless adequate words of Thank you, thank you one and all.
